VISA SERVICES | IMMIGRATION SERVICES CONSULTATION AND ASSESSMENT

Business Visa

A business visa is a type of visa that allows individuals to travel to a foreign country for business-related purposes. The specific requirements, regulations, and privileges associated with business visas can vary widely from one country to another. However, there are some common features and considerations that generally apply to business visas

Permanent Resident

A Permanent Resident (PR) visa allows an individual to live, work, and study in a foreign country on a permanent basis. Unlike a temporary visa or work permit, a PR visa is typically issued for an extended period and may eventually lead to citizenship in some cases. The specific details of PR visas can vary significantly from one country to another, but here are some general aspects associated with Permanent Resident visas

Visitor Visa

A Visitor Visa, also commonly known as a tourist visa, is a type of temporary visa that allows individuals to enter a foreign country for a short duration for purposes of tourism, leisure, or visiting family and friends. The specific features and requirements associated with visitor visas can vary from country to country, but here are some general aspects

Investor Visa

An Investor Visa, also known as a Business or Entrepreneur Visa, is a type of visa that allows individuals to move to a foreign country for the purpose of making a substantial investment in the host country's economy. The specific requirements and benefits associated with Investor Visas can vary widely depending on the country's immigration policies. Here are key features and considerations related to Investor Visas
